KIDS FOR KOSHER FOOD BANK

This week our school received a letter of thanks from the Jewish Community Services Kosher Food Bank for the generous response to their Yom Tov campaign. (See our showcase outside the main office) Please bear in mind that the need for basic food items and other daily necessities is ongoing. Those in need make an appointment to shop, and are not seen by any other shopper. The Food Bank depends on everyone's participation to help combat hunger in our community—one meal, one person at a time. For the month of October the specific requests are grape juice, mayonnaise, canned salmon and sugar. Keep in mind that all the food must be either OU, Chaf-K, O-K, or Star-K certified, making it suitable for any family. Thank you for your continued help. Yasher Koach!

Dear Parents,

Thankfully, the security situation at school has greatly improved and the fear and uncertainty hanging over our heads has dissipated thanks to the efforts of the local FBI in ascertaining that there was no threat in the first place. There is, however, a threat of a totally different kind that hangs over us, and ironically it was one of our extra security guards, a non-Jewish gentleman, at our school for merely three days, who pointed it out to me.

At the conclusion of the afternoon dismissal carpool one day last week, he turned to me and said casually –“ I’ve never seen so many parents talking on their cell phones when picking up their kids from school...!” Unfortunately, in too many cases, it’s true. Our children wait a whole day until they see us again, and we might be there physically, but our attention is elsewhere. I sent home a letter two years ago about this situation – I’m reprinting excerpts below:

“One of the most poignant and important occasions in the day of an elementary or pre-school child is that magical moment when they greet a parent at the end of a long school day.

There are many variations and styles of this encounter based on the nature of the relationships different parents have with their children. One constant, however, should be that the mother or father acknowledge their child in some positive manner, even if understated. Those of us at school derive special pleasure when we see children climbing into their parent’s car, and receive a kiss, a smile or an enthusiastic “how was your day?”

Sadly, those encounters are becoming few and far between. More often than not, the drivers on our carpool line are busy on their cell phones and pay scant attention to their children as they approach and enter the car. While they are making productive use of the wait time, they end up squandering the golden opportunity of starting off the second half of their child’s day on a great footing.

I hope this little insight will help refocus and direct your attention to your child(ren) at these most opportune moments. Let’s keep technology as a tool for enhancing our quality of life, and not as a replacement for the things that matter most.”

Over Sukkos we have the opportunity to make up for lost time – by making our children the central focus of our Yom Tov celebration. We need to not only teach and inspire our children about Sukkos and all its wonderful Mitzvos and Hashkafa lessons, we also need to make our minds and hearts open to their thoughts, ideas, questions and feelings, and closed to the bombardment of the digital universe.

May your Yom Tov find you strongly connected to Hashem and your family. That’s what Simchas HaChag is all about.
