Winning the Jackpot

Dear Parents,

Erev Shabbos Parashas Vayishlach 5780

The subject of children and money is an important one. We find portrayed in this week's Parsha very different perspectives about money and possessions between Yaakov and Esav. With Chanuka coming up, the timing of the reading of these opposing worldviews seems to be anything but coincidental. The stark difference between the contrasting philosophies of Esav and Yaakov plays out clearly in the Chanuka story. In fact the misplaced emphasis on gifts for Chanuka exposes the irony that the majority of those who 'observe' Chanuka today, had they lived in those days, would have more likely identified with the materialism of the Greeks and Hellenists (Esav's descendants) rather than the idealism of Mattisyahu (Yaakov's descendants).

...the majority of those who 'observe' Chanuka today... would have more likely identified with the materialism of the Greeks and Hellenists...

What are we sharing about our values through our reaction, involvement and focus on money and all things commercial. Do we express excitement about large business deals, jumbo sized lottery payoffs, fancy cars, homes, vacations, etc.? If the Chanuka observance is overshadowed by gifts, gifts and more gifts, what legacy are we offering our children about self-sacrifice and dedication to a higher calling?

...Yaakov Avinu recognized that Hashem gives each person what he or she needs to fulfill their mission in this world.

If we focus on understanding the difference between the Yaakov and Esav approaches to money, we can gain important insights into what we should be imparting to our children. Rav Moshe Feinstein zt'l, explains that Yaakov's statement of "I have everything" (33:11), that Rashi explains as "I have everything that I need" means I have what I need to serve Hashem properly. Yaakov Avinu recognized that Hashem gives each person what he or she needs to fulfill their mission in this world. Everything has a purpose.

Esav's mantra on the other hand "I have plenty" (33:9) interpreted by Rashi to mean "I have much more than I need" negates this truth that whatever Hashem gives to someone is for a specific purpose. One cannot have "more than enough", for whatever one has is given by Hashem for some specific purpose. Even the amount of money in one's bank account is not haphazard, but is there for a reason.

...the descendants of Yaakov, who view money as a tool to serve Hashem, and not for any other purpose.

Our children watch and observe our words and behavior very carefully to learn about the world. If we can help them understand that everything is for a purpose and money is given to a person in accordance with his or her ultimate G-dly role in this universe, we will have placed them squarely with the heroes of the Chanuka saga, the descendants of Yaakov, who view money as a tool to serve Hashem, and not for any other purpose. Then they will be truly wealthy.

Best wishes for a wonderful Shabbos,

Rabbi Kalman Baumann

First Grade Siddur Party!

Excitement was palpable in the first grade classrooms this week as they began davening from their brand new, beautifully decorated Siddurim. Thank you to our families who sponsored the Siddurim; the Weissman Family, Barda Family, Pomper Family and Anonymous. Mazel Tov to our boys and girls on this momentous milestone!

Simcha Leiner Concert!

Grow in Greatness— L'iluy Nishmas R' Ephraim Zalman Ben R' Yisroel Asher

This week the girls of KES were treated to their third "Grow In Greatness" assembly. This month's focus is on AMEILUS - effort and perseverance and the Gadol who personified this middah is Rav Nosson Tzvi Finkel. Mrs. Berkman shared with the girls how Rav Nosson Tzvi grew up in Chicago and was known as Nate to his friends. It was through his great AMEILUS B'TORAH that he became the tremendous Gadol that he was. The girls watched a powerful short video about Rav Nosson Tzvi and were then treated to a play - "The Magical Headbands" by their talented Moros. We are confident that the girls will become "AMEILUS Champions" this month!
